Old Teak is a special type of wood. It is carefully retrieved from old construction timber. Characteristically a living product, it consistently matures to become a unique item. Thus, every piece of furniture made of old teak has been given a high quality rating and adds individual charm to any room. Manufacturing these pieces of furniture is an environment friendly process. Each wood lamella is selected manually and processed according to an old tradition.

At home with the World Collection provides you with a large variety of colours. Except for the Queensland Old Teak and Vancouver Shesham series, all the furniture is available in the colours cognac, white wash, colonial dark, nature, deco-white or walnut brown.

Wood is a living material. Small cracks and slits are therefore not defects, but natural changes. If wood is exposed to larger fluctuations in air moisture and temperature, it works on these influences. This can also show in an insignificant lopsidedness on small doors and drawers, which then get slightly stuck or can only be opened with difficulty. Filling pieces can appear in knotholes. These are a natural component of the furniture.
